About the Conference

The current economic climate makes it more necessary than ever for companies to keep control over their finances and resources. Commercial disputes have a tendency to consume large parts of those resources. This Conference will examine how alternative and amicable dispute resolution (ADR) mechanisms can provide companies with greater control over the ever increasing costs and risks of dispute resolution processes. It aims to provide practical advice and tested tools for improving dispute management through the efficient use of mediation.

Topics include

- Dispute analysis and selecting the best-fitting settlement procedure for the dispute
- Financial reasons for implementing ADR and mediation as part of a company strategy towards controlled dispute management
- How companies need to prepare for the future of commercial dispute resolution
- Exchange of know-how on how best to implement and execute ADR mechanisms within corporations, including a mind map for in-house use
- Case examples of how and when companies should involve external counsel

Conference format

The Conference will include presentations by speakers as well as roundtable discussions, interactive group exercises and direct exchanges with all participants.

All presentations will be followed by debriefing sessions in which a rapporteur shall summarize the main points of the presentation. This summary will be visualized on a "mind map" which will further develop with the participants' input throughout the day. This mind map will be a take home document and tool that participants can use to implement what they have gained from the Conference.

Audience

This Conference will be of particular interest to in-house counsel and representatives of corporate management. Lawyers in law firms are also invited to attend, but places for external counsel are limited.

Language

English

Great conference – the annual ICC Mediation Conference is as innovative in its presentation as it is in its subject matter. This is one of the few conferences where corporate counsel can converse with corporate counsel on matters that concern them regarding conflict management and dispute resolution. A truly original and worthwhile event.
