The ICC International Court of Arbitration

The ICC International Court of Arbitration is widely recognized as the world's leading institution for resolving international commercial disputes.

The Court provides parties with a flexible and neutral setting for dispute resolution. It offers confidentiality and extraordinary freedom for parties to choose the framework for how and where they want to resolve their dispute. While the dispute itself is resolved by independent arbitrators, the Court supervises the process from beginning to end, increasing the quality of the process and enforceability of the awards.

There are no restrictions as to who can use ICC Arbitration or who can act as arbitrators. This is reflected in the increasing number of nationalities represented. Since its inception, the Court has administered more than 19,000 cases involving parties and arbitrators from some 180 countries. In 2012 almost 760 cases were filed with the ICC Court. Approximately 10% of the parties involved in those cases came from the Middle East and North Africa.

Today, the Court is at the leading edge of change. It continuously seeks to improve efficiency, control time and costs, and aid enforcement and confidentiality by introducing innovative new arbitration tools and procedures. Established in 1923 as ICC's arbitration body, the International Court of Arbitration celebrates this year its 90th anniversary.
