Developing and effectively using multistakeholder principles

WHEN 24 October 2013TIME 11.00-12.30WHERE Room 1

Many words are used to describe multistakeholder processes and approaches. What do the words really mean? This interactive roundtable aims to deepen the discussion regarding multistakeholder processes for Internet governance and the principles that guide them. Speakers from a range of stakeholder groups and from across geographies will explore what these principles mean, how they can be operationalized at national, regional and international levels, in an interactive format with the audience. The goal of this session is to de-jargonize multistakeholder principles and identify what it really means to apply them in different contexts.

The workshop will build on discussions at the WSIS +10 review event in February 2013, the IGF 2012, and sessions at the IGF 2013.
